The Puget Sound Energy Foundation donated the fuel for the county's fleet of diesel vehicles. Commissioner Jason Bennett says a fuel purchasing manager for the county's fleet department decided it was best to buy from a Canadian company because they're more stable. "They're less likely to have a problem with a hurricane that's going to affect our fleets," says Bennett. "It's a disaster situation to have to go on a first-come first-served basis when we have over 1,000 people in a county that needs to be plowing and keeping the roads open." In return, Puget Sound Energy will receive a $5,000 donation to its Renewables Challenge Fund. "My understanding is that Puget Sound Energy is going to do all they can to increase their own renewable energy on their own system," says Bennett. Puget Sound Energy officials say both companies enjoyed a long, successful business relationship.This invention relates to a method of transporting a lead-acid battery in a semi-trailer, and more particularly to a method of loading such a battery into the trailer, and positioning such a battery inside the trailer, such that the battery remains substantially level and free from damage throughout its transit in the trailer. Conventional railroad cars used for transporting lead-acid batteries are generally of the type described in U.S. Pat. No. 4,471,944, which is assigned to the assignee of this application. These conventional cars are oriented perpendicular to the direction of travel and, as shown in this patent, include two longitudinal framing members
