Once the product of a small team of students and friends, Paint.NET has grown into a community project with a worldwide team of more than 50 people. This site is their way of sharing their work, their passion, and their history. In any event, however, several points of evidence indicate that the opportunity to sit outside the jury room was not crucial to petitioner's conviction. First, petitioner did not complain of the opportunity to sit outside the jury room until a few days after his conviction. Second, the Michigan Court of Appeals had reversed petitioner's conviction and ordered a new trial, but petitioner had elected to plead guilty to a reduced charge. If petitioner's conviction had been reversed and a new trial ordered at petitioner's election, petitioner would have been entitled to move to be outside the jury room during his trial.

Third, the majority of petitioner's witnesses were his own family members; he was not prejudiced by their refusal to testify. Finally, petitioner has not demonstrated any prejudice from being prevented from testifying about his trial. It was obvious to the jury that the charges against petitioner were dismissed and that he was found guilty only of a reduced charge. The state trial judge's ruling, then, was not erroneous. E. Ineffective Assistance of Trial Counsel 42

Petitioner next claims that his trial counsel's assistance was ineffective because he failed to move to suppress the confession, failed to move to strike inadmissible character evidence, and failed to object to improper closing argument by the prosecutor. The state court concluded that the claims were meritless because the trial court had not erred in admitting petitioner's confession or the character evidence, and because any prejudice that might have resulted from the prosecutor's closing argument was cured by the trial judge's instruction to the jury.

43 The standard of review is the same as the previous issue. The Michigan Court of Appeals' denial of this claim was not an unreasonable application of Strickland v. Washington. Although counsel's performance was below the standard that a reasonably competent attorney would have maintained, petitioner has not shown that he was prejudiced by the alleged errors. His own testimony established his guilt of second degree murder. His confession to the police was introduced at trial. Further, the trial judge gave a curative instruction. We have already found that the curative instruction eliminated any prejudice to petitioner. The decision of the state court is not unreasonable. 44 In conclusion, we hold that the decision of the district court is reversed and the case is remanded to the district court with instructions
