Rating: A solid game with a little bit of everything at a price that won't break the bank.

What It Is: Elden Ring is an action RPG played using motion controls. It's one of the best-looking motion games I've seen in a while, but the combination of the motion controls and its deep RPG mode make it just as good of a thinking man's game.

Loving an MMO as much as I do, I'm always on the lookout for my next great action RPG. Elden Ring is one of those games. Taking a different approach from the usual is ok as long as this game doesn't resemble anything we've played before. In the fashion of traditional MMORPGs, you're faced with a choice to construct your own character with numerous options. Of course, I chose the story and going the RPG route as well. Thankfully, this is not an MMO and I was able to jump in and start playing. I adored the combat system, which is the game's true soul! From left joystick, you move forward while right joystick is what you'd call "combo" actions. Press a button to attack, spam the buttons to more attacks, jump to dodge, activate a defensive stance, heal, or even use magic spells. Once you've played a few hours with this game, you'll realize that there are tons of ways to beat an enemy and that the enemies are all so varied that you'll never get tired of trying new moves! Ultimately, it's the storyline that carries the majority of the game. There is a story to be told that actually pits the character against the Elden Lords whom you're "rulers" of in the game. "Elden Ring is an

Back in 2012, I joined the TLDW crew to provide things I do well and help others with their own great skills. The things I do well, I'd like to continue to provide. So I've started my own website and I'll be providing web design services. Green TLDs There's another thing I do well, I design.eco websites. TLDW There are a ton of websites out there, and we all have our preferences in how we want our website to look. For me, I like websites that are clean, have a lot of whitespace, I like navigation that's inline with the rest of the website, and I like colors that flow well together. Ponyo It's a story about a dog that a girl took to the beach and later rescued. It's also about her trying to hide this dog from her parents and friends. It's directed by Miyazaki Hayao and is animated by Studio Ghibli. "... a painter gets a small pebble and fills it with a drop of water; if he is a quick learner he may reproduce the image of a stone he has seen on the beach." Henri Matisse So while I work out, watch TV or read, I try to keep websites simple. I prefer to tell the story with a ton of whitespace than to have a full page of text. I like things that are clean and easy to read. I don't like things that are set apart by a border and give the page the feeling of being an advertisement. Henri Matisse I like simple designs with simple contrasts. Black on white or text on light is nice. I like lots of whitespace and I like a clean look. Most websites have this ability to have a simple look to them, without overdoing it. If I'm designing a logo, I prefer it to look graphic. I like things that are airy, and subtle. I don't like things that are a cut above and beyond. I don't want logos that are simplistic. I want them to stand out on their own. I have a signature in the upper left that's mostly grey.
