I don't think I can." "Then come to the meet. I'll watch out." "Oh, I know you'll be doing that anyway. Now I'll have to go home and get my stuff to carry to the meet." "You're gonna wear that to a basketball game?" "But this isn't just a game. It's the championship." "Well, if you're going to be sloppy and crazy, that's your business." "Oh, you're so smart, looking at it from a practical perspective." "Well, it's simple. I think it's a good idea to look at the bright side of things, not to listen to your fears, and do everything you can to be prepared." "I know, but what if you're mad?" "Don't worry about me being mad. Just do what you know to do and be happy yourself." "OK." Martin remembered how angry his grandmother often got and how she didn't seem to calm down until she'd gotten what she wanted done. She'd looked to Mom when Mom would simmer, and now she had the fake Daddy when she got mad—only it was a battle not to be won. Martin didn't have to worry about Mom. She wouldn't get mad like that. She was easy to get along with, easy to make happy—a great girl, his mother, the best in the world. _The best in the whole world._ No wonder all the girls wanted to marry her. She was a stunning woman in every way imaginable. Look at Mom's smooth complexion, flawless makeup and hair. Look at Mom's gorgeous nose and long slender face and huge blue eyes. And Mom and Dad, what they looked like: Mom had her father's face, her father's nose, her father's long eyelashes, even her mother's high cheekbones. They both had Martin's father's pale eyes, but Mom had it a little better, with her hair almost as blonde as Mom and her height only an inch less than his father's. Martin didn't have to worry. Love was easy to give. Mom always knew. She gave him tons, and he knew he could do the same. But no one would give me love. No one would care enough about me. No one would care as much as Mom cared. No one would fight about me the way Mom and Dad fight about me. Sometimes when he thought he was

This sounds very similar to Galaxy of Fire, but for free. The only real problem is that there is no tutorial. After the second planet is free-roaming with the "control" map, and there are no instructions for doing anything. The iPad version is somewhat smoother, at least in the control screen and other places. There is no text or anything to explain how things work, just instant action. Void Tyrant 1.1.2.3 New (January 2019) Developer: 4 Shadows 4 Shadows has announced a free update to Void Tyrant.
