Here's a list of software that will help you create a.Q: Extract a custom field value from a uri string in Javascript If I have the following URL: How can I get the 'number' value as a Javascript String? A: Why do you need this, by the way? The URI standard defines that the way to do it is just to put the number in the query string. (And you'll have to encode it appropriately.) You might be able to access it using querySelector if you're careful about it, but you're much better off putting the value directly in the URL if you want to. A: This should do it: var a=window.location.search.replace(/^\?/, ""); var num = a.match(/number=(\d+)/)[1]; The regex has a demo here. Why bother with window.location.search when you could simply do window.location.pathname + window.location.search? Windows Media Player has been updated with new features, bug fixes and support for Windows 10. However, if you want to
