During the process of writing 'The Opinionated WordPress Wizard,' I realized I wasn't happy with some aspects of my first attempts. It was starting to feel a little bit like a chore to write. (I know, I've tried.) It won't be a blog that aims to "fix" WordPress. Rather, it will be a space to vent, make dumb jokes, and hopefully share with you some of what I'm learning on this crazy ride called life.

Public Safety Minister Ralph Goodale says the federal government is "encouraged" by the government of British Columbia's delivery of a passenger rail transit system less than a year after rejecting a similar proposal from the provincial government. "Our plan is to measure the performance of the new system. Obviously there are still two to three years to run before the finish line, but even in the short-term, we're pleased that the contract has been awarded and we anticipate that British Columbians will see the benefits of the technology and the technology alone early in the contract," Goodale said on Monday in question period. "They — as I say, the government of British Columbia — are using their own procurement authorities to get the deal done." In November, B.C. Premier John Horgan announced the contract had been awarded to the consortium of British Columbia-based public transit provider TransLink and China's CRRC. In return, the province would pay $1.35 billion for the three-stop cross-boundary light rail project connecting Vancouver with Surrey and Langley. According to the provincial government, the first phase of the project is scheduled for completion in 2023. The contract is worth $774 million, of which $343 million would be paid up front and 40% would be paid over the next three years, while the remainder would be paid over the next 45 years. The

"We often talk about meaning. What it is that we want to achieve, what it is that we seek to attain. But what is the meaning of life? It is simply to be yourself, whatever you are and however you are." - Joseph Campbell

Lifetime achievement should not be about a pile of shiny objects. It should be about the experiences you leave behind. This is what makes life meaningful. What you see in this game is a representation of the afterlife of those who live their life how they want. I think we like the idea of the afterlife being this magical realm of surprises where the dead are rewarded. That is a nice picture, but not how I would really describe it. To me, the afterlife is more about the people you meet and the things you discover when you travel between the lands of the living and dead. Let me explain. Imagine one day you are driving somewhere and are just a tad late. It's not so bad, but then, suddenly, you realise that you are still on the road. You turn the wheel to the left, and your car is no longer on the road. Then, you realise that the road is simply an illusion, and that you are in a vastness of space. Your car is moving through outer space, and you are accelerating at a fantastic speed toward the stars. You suddenly experience a magical moment. You look back. You see your world. It is the world as you know it, but you have outgrown it. You are no longer looking out at a flat, two-dimensional landscape. You look out at a vast, three-dimensional canvas. You look back at Earth, and you still see it as it was when you got here. In another four billion years, will you be still looking at it as you are now, or will you be looking down at your home planet? That is how I would describe the afterlife. Welcome to Mimir's Logical Game

How much of you do you let go of? If you're like me, you don't have time for the next hours of your life. I don't have a hundred things to do and a billion things to worry about. That's because I have everything I need to be happy and productive. I'm not telling you what to do. This is a game. However, I'd like to share my opinion on how to choose and enjoy your life the best. Lifelong achievement should not
