I like the look of the site with the color swatch placed to the left of the text area, and I would like to replicate this in my own design. From my research, I tried using the Color Sketch tool to select a color, but I haven't been able to get it to look the same. A: I would recommend using Photoshop over Illustrator for this kind of work. You can duplicate the site's background layer and add a drop shadow to it, adjusting the opacity as you wish. Then you can create a simple white text element on top of the shadow, with the text color and text stroke set to the same as the background. Treatment of tuberculous meningitis.
