It is an investment in human capital that in short, will make it easier to integrate the knowledge of existing designers into our products and give them confidence to create and innovate in new ways. -Creating models that form the foundation to the design gives us direct contact with the world of the motor industry. This work has a series of advantages in terms of time, cost and quality. After a certain period of time, or when we want to innovate further, this experience and 3D methodology will enable us to have greater freedom in our design process. All of this has been to build something that will be highly valued by the companies and others involved in the vehicle design, and not only to provide a service to a client. It is also a duty to be able to provide professional services, which means working with others and not only designing. -The ultimate goal is that many young designers and those who want to change careers and go into the automotive industry, have the tools to work and not to be restricted to the design of furniture in the architect profession. The teaching methodology we have implemented has the potential to collaborate with other designers, allowing us to design for the motor industry.
